Supports for All Learners

Trapper and explorer, he liked to brag about his past. He once claimed the French pirate Jean Lafitte captured him. He said he spent a year as a pirate before escaping.

In 1823, Glass signed on to a Missouri River expedition. The expedition went badly. American Indians killed some trappers. Later, a grizzly bear attacked Glass, inflicting severe wounds. His fellow explorers had to carry him on a makeshift stretcher. Doing so slowed down their party.

The leader of the group, Andrew Henry, requested two men stay behind to care for Glass. They assumed Glass would die, so they left him. Some think that one of the men who left Glass was famous mountain man Jim Bridger.

Glass Listen After he recovered, he made a journey of over 200 miles to Fort Kiowa. At the time, he revent... when who abandoned him. When Glass caught up with Bridger, he forgave him. Due to Jo status as an active military member, Glass could not kill him. Fitzgerald returned the gun he took from Glass moved on.
